Abraham Lincoln.

Today is the anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln. Lincoln was undoubtedly the greatest personal influence of the nineteenth century. No man played so great a part in the history of his time or through the greatness of his mind and soul and the purity of his life so deeply impressed future generations.

We believe that one reason why Lincoln is so revered by all true Americans is because he was truly unselfish and always endeavored to do what he believed was right. Lincoln possibly did not have a greater mind than many other men of the last century, but he did seem to be able to put aside all personal ambitions, all selfish desires. His one aim was always to seek and find the truth and he was never afraid to advocate the truth.

The life of Lincoln, the greatness to which he attained and the love in which he is held is an unanswerable argument to the cynic, Gladly she gave her time, strength and pessimist and scoffer. To the man who advocates sharp practices in business dealings, selfishness in his relations to his fellowman or claims that success can only be secured through always looking solely for your own benefit, the life of Lincoln shows is preaching a false philosophy.

Lincoln was the Abou Ben Adhem of the nineteenth century. He had a soul big enough to love not only the members of his immediate family, not only his intimate associates, but all mankind. He loved his enemies, blessed them that cursed him, did good to them that hated him and prayed for them that despitefully used him and persecuted him.

"Do It Now."

"Do it now" is one of the good maxims of the present day. These three short words should be the first rule in the business policy of every man. Whether you "do it now" or put it off until some other time will probably determine your success or failure.

It is always a satisfaction to do business with a person who does things when he promises he will, who is always prompt. And there is nothing much more disagreeable than to do business with a man who never does things when he says he will, who always has some excuse for not doing things on time.

And then there is another good feature about the "do it now" policy and that is it requires a man to make up his mind upon questions that are presented to him for determination. If some question comes up and you put off making up your mind what you will do, you will probably let it drift along aud do nothing. You will and love. There could surely be no thus often fail to take advantage of your opportunities and will form loose and slipshod methods of thinking and action.

"Do it now" means making up your mind, arriving at a decision and this conduces to clear, logical thinking and careful and systematic methods in our actions.

If we would only think of the many things that have been neglected by putting them off, when some matter is to be attended to, and "do it now" how much smoother things would run.

If we will always "do it now" it will make things easier and the ruln of the home she made and for smoother both mentally and financially for us and give people added which she had often suffered. O, could confidence in us and make it a real pleasure for them to do business there be a heavenly home for mother. with us.

In Memoriam.

In the home, in the early morning nours, there entered into rest eternal, the sweet spirit of the mother of the household, Eliza Jage, daughter of William and Nancy Moderley. She was born near her old home on the old Moberley estate, Highland county, Onto Nov. 15, 1841, and passed out of life July 11, 1913, aged 71 years, 7 .50 in marriage to Henry G. Fite June 14. 1863 last June marking their golden wedding anniversary. Many years have they seen the sun and shadow of married life. God blessed them with eight children, all living except one son who died in infancy, Lydia, the eldest, now Mrs. Abram Bolser, Jesse W., Nancy (Mrs Rad Davidson), John D., David H , James A. and Herbert M , and six grandchildren. To these sons and daughters this mother was everything 'No love like mother love ever has shown No other worship ever abides and endures. Paithrul, unselfish and patient like yours. None like a mother can charm away pain From the sick soul and the world weary Gentle, self sacrificing, unselfish and devoted to home, this mother was all She often went beyond her physical strength to aid and help others. Generous to the stranger, no one went from her door needy or hungry Neighborly, sharing the joys and sorrows of those around her. She was social, loved the companionship of life hospitality to her friends and loved ones. Uncomplainingly this wife and mother bore her burdens and honestly did her work. What higher praise car we give this noble woman than the words of long ago, "She hath done what she could.

Mrs. Fite from girlhood was a mem ber of the church, identifying herself with the Buford M. E. Church, under the ministry of Rev. Roberts. She lived her religion day by day, following the meek and lowly Savior. She hath changed the mantle of pain for the robe of peace; the cross of earth for the crown of glory; so sweet be the rest of this mother, this loved one until in some happy clime thy face we see This dear woman leaves her husband her children, one half brother, John D. Moberley, of Blanchester, and one half sister, Mrs. T. J. Sprinkle, of Buford, and many relatives, grandchild ren and friends, far and near, who truly oved her.

Since she went home the days have engthened into years, since they came to me and said, "she is gone, gone to derstand it then. There was only one home in all this world to me. She had made that so beautiful by her smiles other home, either in heaven or earth. She often spoke of the heavenly home and yet she seemed to live so much for this earthly home, I little thought she would ever leave me to go there. And vet they said my mother had gone home. It could not be true. There was no other home for her other than the one in which her child and loved ones dwelt. For her to leave meant could she find a home apart from us, even with the gods of paradise. Then well do I remember the words that day and the quiet of the hour when friends gathered in silence and tears, "I go to day with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. prepare a place for you." And he that John McConnaha. read was heard to say, "It was just like mother. She was always preparing a place for you " What did it all mean. wife. Would it be long ere she returned? I know she would hurry. It would not be long when mother was preparing or her boys. That sorrowful day, closed itself to a boy's heart in darkness and sobs, leaving one strange and consoling thought: Wherever mother Orebaugh and son, Edgar, spent Wed is she will be preparing a place for me. I must be sure and not disappoint her and reach the heavenly home early while she waits for me. With that resolution mother's life slipped away from her boy's thoughts and he slept with guardian angels around his bed. Since she went home the evening shadyears memory flies to tender scenes and the present would itself in boyhood Alva Overman and wife were the brow and her voice upon the ear with the longing of the soul; that homing hungry calling so weirdly over the moors of life, like the throbbing of the sea yearning for the unseen shores. Since she went home I dream so much of coming years and in the evening time the threshold of the other home
